

Breeding Bird Atlas

Official Volunteer

The Indiana Breeding Bird Atlas is a six-year project to determine which birds breed in the state and where they nest. In order to survey the bird life in this area efficiently, it is necessary to stop along roads and explore public property. Bird-watchers respect private property, carry no guns, make little noise, and leave no litter. Atlas workers are interested only in observing birds during their breeding season within certain ten square-mile blocks.

If you have questions or concerns about this project, please contact:

John Castrale
812 849-4586
jcastrale@dnr.IN.gov

